UNBEATABLE BADRA At House of Lords

Imagine a young tribal boy who had a dream to become an engineer addressing the House of Lords?

At age nine, Badrahe Naji left Kojira in Khamar district of Himachal Pradesh and reached Delhi. He wanted to be an engineer. His path was long through the grind, from being a humble domestic help and studying on a government loan and finally reaching IITD, the journey was tough. VIDYA endorsed him, he jumped from V to X standard. With the wish of Military Commander/Chancellor VIDYA's office, Badra took up to the task for further studies. Yes, that tribal is today a computer science engineer in Los Angeles, California, U.S.A. Badra is VIDYA's pride and a role model for his village.

Badra is scheduled for a talk at the House of Lords, London in mid September 2011. His visit is being facilitated by Women India Association, U.K., already follow us on our next issue.
